

CHILD CONTACT AND RESIDENCE

It is fair to suggest that the breakdown of adult relationships can affect children badly. It is important to try to make any changes in children's lives as smooth as possible.

This is where we come in. As family lawyers, we can help you sort out any issues you have in relation to child contact and residence.

"Residence" refers to where a child will live. "Contact", as the name suggests, refers to specified contact that the parent without residence has with the child. Some families manage to be extremely flexible and do not require the input of the court. On the other hand, matters often become so fraught that some families need the court to set out specific dates and times for contact.

Given the importance of these issues, we suggest you seek our professional advice. We can help you through the legal process and attempt to obtain the best result for everyone involved. We may suggest mediation.
